DANCE AT THE COWELL

Rosa Montoya Bailes Flamencos
San Francisco's premier Flamenco dance company presents The New Generation, this year's annual concert.

"I am cultivating a group of the finest young dancers who are influenced by the same traditions and approach to Spanish dance as I have been," says Montoya, "and who hold to the same standards of quality and perfection in their art. Also, these dancers are involved in the modern developments taking place in Flamenco, both here and in Spain, which I have always been a part of."

Featured young dancers are Gabriela Aragon from Spain, Gregory de Silva, Amanda Pinera and Marcos Ogo. Also performing are artists from Spain: the world-acclaimed veteran dancer Juan Talavera, renowned singer Charo Monge, and master guitarist Rafael Aragon. November 10 through 13. For details, see listing under November 10.

O Vertigo Danse
In the eyes of Ginette Laurin, Artistic Director of O Vertigo Danse of Québec, La Chambre Blanche is a place whose narrowness and milky walls justify a loss of equilibrium, of consciousness: vertigo. This restraining place, this wan-white room, is as intimate as a bedroom, as mysterious as a hotel room, as cold as a psychiatric hospital, as isolated as a fortress. One by one these sites materialize to set the stage for the emotions they evoke. November 17 through 20. For details, see listing under November 17.

Floating Lanterns
The Purple Moon Dance Project and the GAPA Dance Company present the first collaboration between these two San Francisco-based groups. Floating Lanterns showcases new repertory from both companies.

Purple Moon premieres three works by Jill Togawa dealing with loss, love, family and community. An original score by Miya Masaoka is featured, with costumes by Sharon Page Ritchie, visual art by Pam Penniston, and lighting design by Stephanie Johnson.

The GAPA Dance Company performs three new works: a traditional piece by Ashok Jethanandani in classical Indian Bharata Natyam style; a ballet by Freddie Miranda of Lines Contemporary Ballet set to music by Vivaldi; and a modern dance by renowned dancer and teacher Frank Shawl.

Purple Moon was founded by Togawa to present experiences of lesbians and women of color using a combination of Western modern dance and Asian sensibility and dance.

GAPA Dance Company is a cultural group within the Gay Asian Pacific Alliance of San Francisco. The company presents original choreography inspired by traditional Asian/Pacific and contemporary dance idioms. November 26 and 27. For details, see listing under November 26.

Played as three monologues, set in three international hotel rooms, Three Hotels was hailed by Variety as "simply perfect.... (it) has the thrilling effect of giving us an update on the workings of one of the most searching minds in the theater today. The news is great." TIME described the play as "stunning."

Magic Theatre continues its long-standing collaboration with Jon Robin Baitz, one of the nation's most gifted young playwrights. Considered Baitz' West Coast home, the Magic has produced The Film Society, The Substance of Fire, and last season's The End of the Day.

This two-character play is directed by Renee Shafransky, well-known for her work as collaborator and director of the acclaimed monologues of Spalding Gray, and producer of his films Swimming to Cambodia and Monster in a Box.

Starring as the corporate husband marketing baby formula to Third World nations is film and stage actor Michael Murphy, with award-winning Bay Area actress Lorri Holt as the wife who confronts the inhumanity of his actions and its effect on their marriage.

Michael Murphy is familiar to filmgoers as Woody Allen's wife-cheating friend in Manhattan, an international war correspondent in The Year of Living Dangerously, Jill Clayburgh's philandering husband in An Unmarried Woman, and from memorable roles in several Robert Altman films (including Nashville and M.A.S.H.), and Tim Burton's recent Batman Returns.

Murphy's New York stage credits include Our Town, directed by Henry Fonda, Sam Shepard's The Curse of the Starving Class, and Wallace Shawn's The Hotel Play.

One of the Bay Area's leading actresses, Lorri Holt has received outstanding critical notices for many years. Last season she appeared in Berkeley Repertory's acclaimed Dancing at Lugnasa and Blue Window.

Holt created the role of Harper in the Mark Taper Forum workshop production of Angels In America (Millennium Approaches), and appeared in ACT's The Learned Ladies and Taking Steps. She was also a member of Eureka Theatre, where she performed in Top Girls and Cloud Nine.

Three Hotels was originally commissioned by PBS's "American Playhouse." The play is another of Baitz's scathing societal exposés. The characters are a man and woman living in a business world fraught with inhumanity, where their isolated states lead them to a discovery of the brutal complications of rampant capitalism.

Three Hotels opened October 18 and continues through November 20. For details, see listing under November 2.

The world premiere of Night Train To Bolina is the next production of the Magic's 1994-95 season. Cuban-born playwright Nilo Cruz, an NEA Artist in Residence and Carnegie Mellon Award recipient, makes his Magic Theatre debut with this lyric, haunting story of two children. Threatened by starvation and abuse, they flee their rural village for life in the city.

Their journey, from childish games played among the graves at their village cemetery, to a cruel, enforce separation by the devout missionaries who save them from life in the streets, is told with unblinking honesty and surprising humor.

Night Train To Bolina previews November 9 through 12, opens November 15, and runs from November 16 through December 18. For details, see listing under November 15.

Magic Theatre is continuing its successful Pay What You Can program. Each production in the 1994-95 season will include one Wednesday night performance when theatergoers pay only what they are able to afford.

"We believe Pay What You Can performances are a vital part of making the arts available to all members of the community," says Mame Hunt, Magic's artistic director. "We are pleased we can share the work of the Magic with all who are interested in new and innovative theater."

Fifty Pay What You Can tickets are made available on the designated performance night, at the door only, on a first-come-first served basis. The designated night for Three Hotels is November 9, for Night Train, December 7. For information, call the Magic box office, 441-8822.

TELLABRATION

Grownups need story time as much as children do, and sometimes sitcoms just don't fill the bill. On November 19, storytellers all over the country will entertain audiences of adults with powerful, exciting and humorous tales.

The San Francisco Story Swappers present Tellabration '94, in the Conference Center at Fort Mason. This is the first time the Bay Area has participated in this nationwide event.

The San Francisco program features Angela Lloyd and Steve Sanfield. Master of Ceremonies is Dennis Campagna. The evening is a benefit for the National Storytelling Association and local storytelling activities.

As part of the Tellabration weekend, Lloyd and Sanfield offer workshops on Sunday, November 20. This is an opportunity to work with and get feedback from two master storytellers. Their knowledge and experience from years of work and study have been distilled into a few lessons and techniques that can help others become more powerful and effective tellers of tales.

The first workshop, "The Art of Storytelling and Critique Session," encourages each participant to expand the use of storytelling in their personal and professional lives. Through Sanfield's extraordinary critiques, "learn more just listening than in a year of telling." This workshop takes place from 9:30am to 1pm.

Angela Lloyd offers "Story Polishing and Adding Uniqueness," practical ways to add power, warmth and humor, and techniques to "get the you into your stories." The day ends with Lloyd's joyous and hilarious tips on how to incorporate music, sound, and rhythm. This session runs from 1:30 to 5pm.

Tellabration '94 starts at 8pm on Saturday. Admission is $10; reservations are recommended. The workshops are $35 each, or $50 for both. Enrollment is limited; pre-registration is recommended. For information about workshops, and to reserve tickets for Tellabration, call 826-1914.

FOUR POETS

National Poetry Festival
The trees inside are moving out into the forest, the forest that was empty all these days where no bird could sit no insect hide
no sun bury its feet in shadow
the forest that was empty all these nights will be full of trees by morning.

Adrienne Rich

Adrienne Rich is the author of more than 20 books of poetry, including The Diamond Cutters, Snapshots of a Daughter-in-Law, Time's Power, and a recent book of essays, What is Found There. She published her first book of poetry, A Change of World, in 1951, for which she won a Yale Younger Poets Prize. She has since been the recipient of two Guggenheim Fellowships, the National Book Award, a MacArthur Award, and other honors.

Chana Bloch is a prominent poet and translator who teaches writing at Mills College. Thomas Avena is editor of The Bastard Review and author of a collection of poetry about AIDS.

The 10th Annual National Poetry Festival, sponsored by the National Poetry Association, takes place at venues all over the country in October and November. The three poets read together on Wednesday, November 16, beginning at 8:30pm at the Fort Mason Conference Center in Building A. Tickets are $10 at the door. For information, call 776-6602.

ENVIRONMENTAL AWARD

Everyone knows Chevy Chase for his comic portrayals on Saturday Night Live—as the bizarre TV news anchor, or fighting off a swarm of killer bees, or taking pratfalls impersonating President Gerald Ford. Not so well known is his role, along with his wife Jayni Chase, as a dedicated environmentalist.

The Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC) is honoring Jayni and Chevy Chase with its Global Environmental Award for their efforts. The award is being presented at a festive dinner dance, "Coastal Commotion—Let's Make Waves."

Chevy Chase has actively used his success as an actor and comedian to draw attention to and promote environmental awareness. Jayni Chase is a founder of the Center for Environmental Education, and both Chases worked with the US Environmental Film Festival held in Santa Monica. Determined to leave their three daughters a better world, they are staunch supporters of efforts to improve California's environment.

Founded in 1970, the Natural Resources Defense Council has more than 170,000 members. It specializes in litigation, advocacy and research to protect our air, water and food supply. The organization recently derailed two projects that could have killed or injured thousands of marine mammals living in the Monterey Bay and Channel Islands National Marine Sanctuaries. This year the NRDC also participated in a national public service campaign about ending water pollution and promoting water conservation.

"Coastal Commotion" is an annual fundraising event for NRDC. Many of the City's premier chefs and restaurants have contributed to a splendid dinner, and locally-known specialty bartenders will be on hand with their signature drinks. Dancing is to the music of Big Bang Beat.

"Coastal Commotion" takes place Saturday, November 12, in the Herbst Pavilion. Tickets are $175. For information, call 777-4083, extension 331.

HERB CAEN

San Francisco Chronicle

"The city is like a snake, shedding its skin, changing constantly, moving about in unexpected directions," writes Herb Caen in his book Herb Caen's San Francisco, 1976-1991. From the assassination of Mayor Moscone and Supervisor Milk to the fiftieth anniversary of the Golden Gate bridge, the book is Caen's characteristically idiosyncratic take on the eventful recent history of "everybody's favorite city." He joins host Anne Lamott for the second presentation in the 1994 Great Writers Series held every year at Fort Mason Center to benefit SOJOURN, the Episcopal Chaplaincy at San Francisco General Hospital.

No one is more qualified to write and speak about San Francisco than Herb Caen. His daily column for the San Francisco Chronicle has been running since 1938, the longest in the country. Always popular for its wry humor and warm humanity, the column is sometimes hilarious and occasionally vulgar, but more often than not powerful, lyrical, and poignantly optimistic. Known as the "king of three-dot journalism," the man and his ellipses are local institutions. "If it's not in Herb Caen's column, it didn't happen...."

Series host Anne Lamott is the author of four novels and the current bestseller, Operating Instructions, about coping with her son's first year and her best friend's painful struggle with terminal cancer. She is a board member of SOJOURN and hosted last year's Writers Series, as well as appearing in conversation with Armistead Maupin.

SOJOURN's multi-faith volunteer chaplains provide a non-invasive, non-judgemental ministry of "invitational presence" to the patients, their loved ones, and the staff at San Francisco General Hospital. Although they care for people throughout the hospital, the chaplains' presence is especially felt in the emergency room, trauma center and AIDS wards. Recent budget and staff reductions in the Health Department have meant that SOJOURN volunteers are often the only people available to care for the emotional well-being of patients and their families.

This Bay Area Great Writers Series event takes place Monday, November 7. Refreshments are at 7:30pm; the program begins at 8pm. Tickets are $20.

The final event in the 1994 series features sinologist Orville Schell with novelist Martin Cruz Smith on December 5. For information, call 206-8500.

Russian Lacquer Artists
Pavel Tikhomirov's artistic mastery combines subtle refinement and balanced composition with vivid colors, complex ornamentation and intense contrasts of color and value. These lacquered miniatures with features as bright as the feathers of the legendary firebird bring to mind "Once upon a time...."

The centuries-old art of lacquered miniature and icon painting is one of the most brilliant expressions of the Russian spirit. This tradition has continued from generation to generation, each village maintaining its own style and technique.

Tikhomirov has had more than two decades of experience in designing, creating, teaching and restoring icons and lacquer miniatures in Russia and abroad. His work has been shown in Tokyo, Paris, New York and Washington, D.C.

In Russia, the icon played an essential traditional role in revealing the image of God. The icon painter assumed the special role of messenger of the sacred. Tikhomirov's icons seem to glow from within, conveying a feeling of peace, spirituality and beauty.

The individual works are jewels of precision. Included in the exhibition are paintings, small chests, boxes and icons. The chests and boxes are often painted on all sides, sometimes inside as well. The images depicted are bibilical subjects, fairy tales, legends, and miniature portraits. Tikhomirov's wife Natasha enhances his creations with fine, ornate border designs that harmonize with his work.

The Tikhomirovs demonstrate their ancient and elegant craft at the Museum, from 1 to 3pm on Saturday, November 12; Saturday, December 3; and Wednesday, December 14.

Both exhibitions opened October 29 and continue through December 31. For details, see Galleries listing.

The Museum presents its annual Holiday Gift Shop from Friday, November 25 until Christmas Eve, Saturday, December 24.

Special holiday hours begin on November 25 and continue through December 23: Sunday and Monday 11am to 5pm, Tuesday through Friday 11am to 6pm, Saturday 10am to 6pm. The Museum is closed Thanksgiving Day. Hours on Christmas Eve, Saturday, December 24, are 10am to 5pm. For information, call 775-0990.

Contemporary Cast Glass
In the last decade, contemporary glass has been freed from the functional and the purely aesthetic, shattering previous expectations about its parameters. Artists have found new ways of using glass, for sculpture, installations, furniture and even set design.

The San Francisco Craft & Folk Art Museum presents one exciting aspect of this contemporary art form—cast glass—focusing on nine artists.

Working with the ancient method of pouring molten liquid into molds, they create objects that vibrate with the tension born of using traditional techniques for contemporary forms. The exhibition as a whole celebrates the diversity of this medium through each artist's unique style.

Hank Murta Adams combines cast glass with metal to create torsos, heads and other objects that recall fragments of ancient architecture. Clifford Rainey is internationally known as a sculptor who works in various media, including glass. His monumental torso in this show is representative of the stature of his work.

Vincent Leon Olmsted comments on the contemporary world in his stiff but approachable robot-like figures, while Chris Tedesco sees his pieces as visual poems. The work of James Watkins might be considered the most classical in the exhibit, evoking an elegant dreamlike ambience.

Jeremy Popelka's large, highly textural vessels capture the luminescence of light as it passes through the pieces, while the poured colored glass in the internal space of David Ruth's sculptures explores the realm of inner life. Robin Grebe's haunting, magical figures are semi-autobiographical. Finally, Robert Bellucci's cast glass portraits embody the artist's moods, feelings and thoughts.

FORT MASON CENTER ...

... will remember Leo Lee.

LEO LEE

Leo Lee, founding president of Western Public Radio and friend to many of us associated with Fort Mason Center, died of cancer at his home in San Francisco on Wednesday, September 14. Leo was 77 years old.

During his very productive, creative and varied life, Leo held many important jobs, won prestigious awards, and started many successful organizations.

He was also famous both as a curmudgeon who challenged the complacency of public radio management, and as a sympathetic role model for many budding independent radio producers. The high regard in which Leo was held by both public and private funders enabled him to raise large amounts of grant money for the projects he started.

But to many of us, Leo was a fascinating character with great stories of San Francisco and Northern California from the '50s to the present, a person who never let obstacles prevent him from achieving his destination, the endearing guy in cowboy boots and bolo tie who greeted you with "hiya, kiddo."

Leo was generous with his ideas, time and spirit. He was a pleasure to know, and we consider ourselves fortunate to have had him grace Fort Mason Center with his presence since 1977. We will always remember him.

Memorial services will be held for Leo at the Press Club of San Francisco at a date to be determined. Contributions in Leo's memory may be made to Western Public Radio, Fort Mason Center, San Francisco 94123.

WOMEN ARTISTS

The very first exhibit for women artists was in 1882 at the Salle Vivienne in Paris. Later in that decade women were accepted for the first time as students at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts and in exhibits at the Grand Palais. A woman won the prestigious Prix de Rome for the first time in 1909. These accomplishments resulted from the efforts of an organization of women artists called the Union des Femmes Peintres et Sculpteurs (UFPS).

In the tradition of this groundbreaking organization, an International Arts Festival is presented at Fort Mason Center by the Association of Women Artists. On exhibit is a juried selection of contemporary work in a variety of media by some 100 women from both Europe and the United States.

Among the many pieces on exhibit are "Petits Betons Noirs" by French sculptor Duchamp-Jegu, abstract acrylics by Switzerland's Elisabeth Moers, "The Flower of Cold," an oil on canvas by Finnish painter Elena Maijala, the tapestry "Pourquoi Pas" by France's Jacqueline Hurdebourcq, Japanese paper tapestries by Denmark's Grete Brodersen, and "Earthquake '89," an oil on wood triptych by Georgette Owens, a French artist now living in San Francisco.

The Alliance of Women Artists was started in California in 1988 to create opportunities for professional women artists. The organization promotes exhibits in museums and university galleries and is seeking to create a museum particularly for women artists. Members of the Alliance have exhibited at the International Exhibition of Women Artists in the Grand Palais in Paris, and at the UFPS salon, Contemporaines. The European participants in this exhibit were selected from the many fine women artists who now show at the Grand Palais.

The UFPS is renowned in Europe for a century of service to women artists. Among its legendary members have been Rosa Bonheur, Camille Claudel, Leonor Fini, Marie Laurencin, Germaine Richier, Suzanne Valadon, and Viera Da Silva.

The International Arts Exhibit takes place at the Firehouse from Friday, November 4, through Monday, November 7, 10am to 4pm. Admission is free. For more information, call 461-9054.
